It looks like ths deal was first offered to Alan and he refused or his team didn't hit it off with the developer. Trust your judgment---not Kevin's. It would be great to know exactly how many sales or pre-sales they actually have deposits on. I will try and get through the attachments and get more comments to you. If you don't really love it- don't take it on-your plate is getting full and ultimately you will be the responsible party. You also really need to feel really good about the JV partner. He will have a major role in making it happen. I'm not so worried about the past failures as I am about the chemistry. We should also have a controlling interest and complete say on all but "significant matters". The last thing you need is a conflict situation with another partner.

This is great info - Kevin Fox had really insightful observations with difficult questions - Philip's answers are in bold (you may not see the bold on blackberry. This is a must read.
